In the context of xmlrpc-epsilon, it means that an XMLRPC client is requesting a name from a server. > A socket should contact a server. And a socket is defined by the socket() API. No I don't believe so. And in fact, the socket API is at the bottom of the xmlrpc-epsilon.h file which is specifically generated for epsilon to emulate a socket interface. > Trying to place a _binding onto a socket will result in a > descriptor error. I'm thinking a dummy "bind" method should be added to xmlrpc_client.C to catch this error. The CRITICS: Methodology and Indicators of Community-level Innovation for Health and Nutrition (CRITICS), a comprehensive, cluster-randomized controlled trial, was implemented in Mexico from 2009-2012. The purpose of CRITICS was to evaluate the effect of the social and health innovation Intersectoral Health Promotion (IHPI) approach on nutrition of vulnerable populations with the aim of improving diet and reducing obesity. The study was implemented in two cities of the State of Morelos, Mexico, both of which are medium-sized urban areas. Following recommendations from the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), 25 randomly selected census tracts and houses were surveyed at baseline in each city. Individuals in households were invited to participate in a survey of health and diet and their children received a brief physical examination (Body Mass Index [BMI] was estimated) if they were present. Nutritional status was assessed through a 24-hour dietary recall, anthropometry, and biomarkers (of glucose and lipid metabolism). A cross-sectional sample of 6636 children was recruited for the study, resulting in a complete data set for 6616 children (96.8%). We quantified change in BMI z-score and the prevalence of obesity for both boys and girls. Statistical analysis included comparison of baseline to intervention group(s), linear and logistic regression analysis. The IHPI approach was associated with an overall reduction in the prevalence of obesity (6.1 vs. 3.8%, adjusted odds ratio [aOR] 0.51, 95% CI 0.38-0.68, p
